a daunting prospect
traveling for so long

a castle on a mountain
it vanished
a rock allowed her to cast a shadow

shadowy castle
how quiet it was
it were the shadows
that swallowed the sound.

they drew us in
walked into the woods

leaves heavy with heat
body of water in the air

a path stretched out
scent of water
towards a strange source a sort of negative sun

and there it was
and the sun had gone
fell into the sea
into a thousand suns

Journey

a thousand suns
perhaps what we sought perhaps

clouds were passing
and the trees
whispered to us
unknown sounds

Journey

we had to leave
we knew
a last glance
illuminated by water

we went back
a tether
between her
and the water

spell was woven
shadow flashed
we were moved

opened our eyes
we were inside
sky and clouds were of shades inside another outside another inside the sun hesitated

across the sky

Journey

misty beams
blinding and foreboding

Journey

four trees
sheltered from rays
with little time

she wondered
no shield lasts forever

Journey

see the balance

Journey

suns swapped spaces
wintersun and summersun

serenity
